Interesting Testimony Trap Bill Hearing

Cannerymen say its passage will be their ruin. Fishermen tell of destructive practices. Remedies

As expected, the cannerymen who testified before the joint committee hearing on the fish trap bill, upheld the trap as a means of catching salmon as compared with the sein, while the fishermen who were given a hearing testified to its destructive qualities and the reported vicious practices in regard to the location of traps across the mouths of streams. In almost all cases, the canners said that the passage of the bill would force them to close their plants.

Canneryman Forbes, of the Excursion Inlet cannery suggested as a means of conserving the salmon—"Hatcheries, operated by government, in scientific hands—Enforcement of fishing laws—Protection of fishing districts." Wm. H. Lewis, of Wrangell, says "Pro-

Skookum Jim's Story Reported Confirmed

According to a dispatch from Skagway it looks as though there is no longer any reasonable grounds for doubting the authenticity of Skookum Jim's gold strike south of Teslin Lake, says the Ketchikan Miner. J. E. Owens had arrived in the Lynn Canal town from the Teslin country with $800 worth of gold dust he had taken out of the ground. He purchased an outfit and returned to the interior without delay. The story continues that the Carmack-Skookum Jim party had been in camp at Caribou Crossing for several days awaiting the coming of several Dawsonites who were friends of Carmack and whom he wanted to be in on the new strike.

More Speedboats -Bug Is Busy

Last week's article on the prospective 30 mi. speedboat is well digested ere this. This week we feed the fans on the latest dope, which is about another, making two mark you, speed boat which will be constructed by Wm. Fletcher for himself, with which to beat the 30 mi boat. This one is to be a monoplane embodying features similar to last year's winner but of stronger build and will be powered with a Chicago motor of 35 rated h. p. manufactured by the Autoparts Supply Company, of Chicago.

On a recent steamer, Cunningham & Sorset received a 12 h. p. Grimm motor which will be installed in the fast runabout, Alicris. The Alicris made good time last season with a small Scripps and a high speed motor of greater power will make a fine showing.

At present, the Sports Editor can get no more information of other boats of this class but as the bug bites quickly and agencies realize the advertising value of contests, whether their engines win or lose, more announcements may come and anyway we are closer to the big race meet mentioned in the Sentinel last week.

Appreciation

Editor WRANGELL SENTINEL:

Having discovered the little fire at the mill last Wednesday, I thought I would say a word of appreciation of our firemen.

I have seen the firemen of other places turn out in a hurry but have never seen such a prompt response as on that occasion. I do believe it was much less than five minutes from the time I gave the alarm until the boys were there with the hose carts.

With such prompt service, our little city can rest assured that the dread destroyer cannot get under much headway before our gallant firemen are on hand to give battle.

Quiet Wedding

At the Wrangell Hotel last evening, Miss Mary Stubbs, of Everett Washington, and Captain C. H. Hankins were united in marriage by Rev. H. P. Corser. Captain Hankins is Master of the Steamer Alaska and with his bride left late in the evening for a trip to Santa Ana. The Ed thinks the reason the wedding was represented to him as a quiet affair may be that the usual serenade did not follow, but cheer up. The noise may be yet to come.

New Uhler Building

Mrs. Ida M. Uhler, who owns the property on Front and Grief Street across from the Stikine Hotel, has a crew at work this week tearing down the old Wrangell landmark on the site to replace it with a new building. The new building will be built for commercial purposes on the ground floor, with apartments or rooms above.

Steers Six Hours While At Anchor

A most amusing and remarkable story is being told on George Skelton this trip. It seems the tug Alaska and tow of boxes on the barge Garnet, struck some heavy head wind while on the way to Funtr Bay. On finding good holding ground the Alaska's hook was thrown over but her crew was unable to haul in the towline against the wind and sea. George kept on steering the scow, it is said, for six hours while the boat lay at anchor. True or made out of whole cloth the story is a good one.

More Activity

Each Day

Cannery crews and salters flocking northward to prepare for the fish

Each day at this season shows a greater activity in the commercial fishing of Southeastern Alaska. During the past week, several cannery crews have come north and mild curing and salting outfits are migrating this way like the birds of summer. The seven small trolling boats from Astoria, Oregon, have arrived in Ketchikan, where they will have headquarters this season. The Hydra and outfit of power trollers, supplies and gear. The Little Tom, chartered this season from the Pillar Bay cannery by T. E. P. Keegan, who was superintendent at the Shakan cannery last year. Mr. Keegan will salt and mild-cure near Chatham Straits. The Shakan Cannery crew arrived this week on the Mariposa, Wednesday and the Cape Edwards cannery crew were brought north on the Curacao.

Development.

On another page we are running a notice of call for bids on National Forest timber on the Stikine River amounting to 300,000,000 feet of cypress, cedar, spruce and hemlock, both sawtimber and pulpwood. The following clipping from the Dispatch, of April 2nd removes, perhaps, the mystery of the sale.

Washington, D. C., April 2.—The government has just received the first application for the sale of large amounts of timber from the national forests of Alaska, two propositions having been made by American companies which propose turning wood into pulp for the manufacture of paper. The proposed plan is to prepare the pulp in mills to be erected in Alaska and to ship it to paper mills in the United States; perhaps by way of the Panama canal. If industrial conditions are considered to be favorable enough, however, it is likely that the paper mills also will be built in Alaska, saving the expense of freighting the pulp to the United States—

It is a well-known fact that the owners of large paper mills in the East have been scouting the Northwest for years looking for timber to replace the rapidly diminishing supply in the vicinity of their mills. The Sentinel man has seen trainload after trainload of Canadian pulpwood brought into the immense plants in Wisconsin, which shows that the manufacturer of paper is willing to pay duty and make long shipments of raw material than attempt to move the immense plant but the balance will swing the other way soon and we may see a big plant at the mouth of the Stikine in the course of time. However, the manufacture of crude pulp is all that is likely to be done for some time in Alaska.

Living Minimum Wage.

Since the the Chicago commission investigation of the wages of the large commercial establishments and the findings in the matter relative to the effect on the morality of the employees of the below living minimum wage, has it not suggested itself to you that a boycott of these cheap firms would help the poor worker to obtain the living minimum wage? Even in far-off Alaska the patronage of home merchants in preference to Spears & Sawbuck would help. Your home merchant pays a living wage and you know it.

DAMES AND DAUGHTERS.

Iowa is to have a woman overseer of the poor in the person of Miss Adah Hopkins, formerly secretary of the New York school of philanthropy.

Mrs. Elizabeth Leavitt of California at the age of ninety-four cast her first vote for president of the United States at the recent election. Mrs. Leavitt is a native of New Hampshire.

The war in the Balkans has given the world its first woman war correspondent. Miss Mary Dunham, who covered the campaign from Montenegro for the London Daily Chronicle. Miss Dunham is considered one of the most reliable living authorities on the near east.

The richest woman in Europe, next to Frau Krupp von Bohlen, owes her fortune to the beet sugar industry. Mme. Lebaudy, mother of Jacques, emperor of Sahara, is worth at least $10,000,000. She holds her wealth in horror and lives under an assumed name in order to avoid publicity. Her residence all the year round is a small flat in Versailles, where the domestic staff consists of one servant, who is assisted in the work by her mistress. Mme. Lebaudy gives away pretty nearly the whole of her income.

A Roadless Land.
Russia is almost a roadless land. It is inconceivable to the foreign visitor who has ever left the beaten track of the railways in Russia how a great empire can have subsisted so long and so successfully without even a pretense at roads. The secret lies in the fact that for five or six months in the year nature herself provides roads over the greater part of Russia—admirable smooth, glassy roadways over hard worn snow. The traffic is further cheapened over these roads by the substitution of a sledge runner for the wheel and axle. This brings the cost of land carriage as near the cheapness of water borne freight as possible, and it is the principal reason why Russia in the twentieth century is still a roadless land.

Original Confidence Man.
A story is told of old New York and of how the expression "confidence man" meant a man in whom one could not place confidence at all. It is said that some years ago a very well dressed man, with a courteous address, was wont to walk up and down the principal streets of the city. Whenever he met a stranger who looked hopeful to him he would approach the man, and with the most delightfully frank manner he would ask:

"My dear sir, have you confidence enough in me, an entire stranger to you, to lend me $5 for an hour or two?"

And it is said that the man made an extremely good living by this very simple means.—New York Sun.

And then Everybody set up a howl, and they had to stop quarreling to attend to him. Pittsburgh Post.

A GREAT INVENTION.

How the Bessemer Process Revolutionized the Steel Industry.

The pessimistic inventor who holds that the hand of all the world is against him and that his ideas are so ahead of the times that they may not be appreciated until he is dead and gone, is still broad in the land, writes W. A. Du Puy in Scientific American. He believes that he has the facts from which to draw a conclusion that he who makes an invention that is revolutionary is to suffer many reverses and to wait long for his reward. There are many cases of record to substantiate this belief. There is, however, a question of their application to the inventor of today.

There is the case of Sir Henry Bessemer, for instance, and his difficulty in inducing the world to use his obvious and revolutionary methods of producing steel. So great was the effect of the Bessemer process upon the steel business that the production in England jumped from 50,000 tons a year to 4,000,000 tons immediately after its introduction and so great was the effect of the cheaper methods of refinement upon price that steel declined from $300 a ton to $40 a ton. Yet the only way Bessemer could get his process used was to put up a factory, manufacture steel and undersell his competitors.

Bessemer went at the problem of improving the manner of making steel deliberately. He wanted a stronger metal for the barrels of big guns. He knew nothing of the business. He began at the bottom and learned the science of it. In the end he made a retort with provision for forcing air in from below. He melted his iron and turned on the air. The whole immediately became a sparkling furnace that burned so hotly and so rapidly that it was impossible to reach the valve which would turn off the air. So hot was the fire that the very fastenings of the retort were nearly melted. The transforming process was, however, completed before the heat had demolished the plant. So was the discovery made.

Yet those people with whom Bessemer contracted for the use of his process failed utterly in getting results and abandoned it. He formed a company of his own, built a plant and began the production of steel. This he sold at a price that the producers under the old process could not meet and still made a fabulous profit. Thus, he proved the value of his patents and, after many years, brought them into general use and from the royalties he received he waxed fabulously rich.

The Christmas Tree.

The Christmas tree was first introduced into London and Paris in 1840.

The Christmas tree is said to have become general in Berlin in 1780; in Hamburg, 1796; in Dresden, 1807, and in Vienna, 1817.

It is believed that the first Christmas tree seen in Germany made its appearance at Strassburg in 1604, although it is suggested that in the year 1546 there may have been such a tree at Schlettstadt.

The records of Alsace contain reference to the Christmas tree in 1737 and 1750 at Zittau and Nassau respectively. Goethe, in "Werther," describes the tree as we know it, decorated with lamps and playthings, sweets and other things going to furnish a children's paradise.

Fish Poison

—The poison that fishermen are commonly troubled with might be prevented by the proper care of BRUISES and CUTS. We have the "DOPE," you have the "DUST," let's get acquainted.
